

July 31, 2013

Contact: Jason Davis

Email: jvdavis@gmail.com

Cell: 512 587 5208

Last Minute Eatin' Launches; Gets You the Hottest Table in Town

New York, NY — Do you love eating out but hate making plans? There's nothing worse than trying to find a great table when you need it most, only to find that all your favorite places are completely booked. New York City can be expensive, but the thought of eating bad food at a second or third tier restaurant is unpalatable.

Last Minute Eatin' is an experiment in immediate gratification and schedule free living. When same day restaurant openings come up, they get tweeted from @LastMinuteEatin along with a link to make your reservation on OpenTable. Last Minute Eatin' continuously monitors thousands of reservation openings and cancellations every day, so if you see a table tweeted, rest assured it's one of the hottest tables in the city for your last minute plans.

Last Minute Eatin' is not about 30% off coupons, free drinks, or 2 for 1 "special offers" at places where no one wants to go. Last Minute Eatin' is about spending money and enjoying life. Today, it's restaurant reservations. Tomorrow, concert tickets, sporting events, bars, clubs, hotels, or maybe even helicopters?

<http://www.lastminuteeatin.com>

@LastMinuteEatin

About Dr. Jason Davis

Last Minute Eatin' was designed and built by Dr. Jason Davis. Dr. Davis is a New York City entrepreneur, data scientist, and hacker. He previously founded, developed, and sold ad-tech company Adtuitive to Etsy, and spent his tenure at Etsy improving various aspects of the marketplace. He holds a PhD from the University of Texas at Austin, a BS in computer science from Cornell, and currently resides in Brooklyn with his wife and dog, Monster. He blogs at drjasondavis.com, and you can follow him at @jasondavis on Twitter.